

YOKO INUO - PROFILE SYNOPSIS

About

My life mission is to create opportunities to increase the number of people who are able to create their own unique and happy way of living, working, and learning, and to promote the realization of the life they desire. I have a sense of mission to create a society in which each individual can utilize his or her own strengths to truly live in peace and co-prosperity on a global scale.

After graduating from university (Department of Chemistry, Faculty of Science) in 2000, I have worked in the IT industry, event industry, and wedding industry. In 2006, I was selected to represent Japan in the Japanese government's leadership program (Ship for Southeast Asian and Japanese Youth Program), which led me to a career in human resource development. In 2007, I joined a human resource development consulting firm as a trainer, marketing manager, and consultant. I have worked with many companies ranging from start-up ventures to major corporations.

I am highly motivated to grow and actively participate in various leadership training programs around the world. I also have time for introspection and self-dialogue to look objectively at what I value and how I feel. I also write down my own ideas and thoughts in my journal. I also value having dialogues with others, and in addition, I always have a mentor.
